Baggy or hip-hugger, straight-leg or boot-cut, jeans are one of the most popular garments in the world. Their popularity and diversity might shock Jacob Davis. He is the tailor who invented them in 1873. He just wanted to make tough work trousers for miners. His “stroke of genius” came when he added metal rivets, or fasteners, at stress points on the seams and pockets. Workers found that these rivets made the parts last longer. Davis went into business with Levi Strauss, a rich San Francisco merchant. Levi Strauss & Co was soon making thousands of “waist overalls.” That’s what jeans were called at the time. Levi Straus has changed its top product very little over the years. In 1922 men had stopped using suspenders. So the company added belt loops. In the 1960s, people began calling the trousers jeans. A t-shirt and jeans became the outfit of choice for many people. Bell bottoms and boot-cut versions appeared. In the 1970s, designer versions cemented jeans’ place in popular Culture. By the 1980s, hundreds of companies made the pre-washed, pre-faded jeans common today.
